INTRODUCTION

Serious study of extra-canonical Jewish writings from the four centuries between 200 B.C. and 200 A.D. is sometimes hampered by difficulty in locating texts, since editions and translations of these works are scattered through a wide range of books and journals. It is the purpose of this bibliography to guide the student to these texts.

An attempt has been made to include all of the major writings commonly classified with the Old Testament apocrypha and pseudepigrapha, as well as the published, non-biblical manuscripts from the Dead Sea Scrolls and the writings of Flavius Josephus and Philo of Alexandria. For each work, at least one edition of each major version is listed, followed by at least one English translation. In many cases, multiple editions and English translations are included, and special attention has been given to recent translations and to accessible collections. Generally, the English translations follow the versions from which they are translated. For example, a work extant in Greek and Ethiopic will have entries ordered as follows: editions of Greek texts, English translations of Greek texts, editions of Ethiopic texts, English translations of Ethiopic texts. Since some publications contain both editions and translations of several versions of a given work, such ordering of entries has not always been possible.

The sections of this bibliography are quite different, due to the state of research for different types of texts. Since the Old Testament apocrypha are well known, relatively few sources are listed for them. The pseudepigrapha are more carefully treated, since texts are published sporadically and for many works more recently. A broad definition of pseudepigrapha has been followed, thereby including fragments of historical and poetic works which are not technically pseudepigraphic, but which are associated with the period. The most detailed listings are for the Dead Sea Scrolls, since their initial editing is still in progress and the nature of the documents and fragments has produced numerous and diverse publications. Some unpublished Dead Sea Scrolls fragments have been listed here, but this bibliography is not comprehensive for the unpublished material.

Since many texts have been given a wide variety of titles in the literature, alternate titles are listed. An Index of Document Titles, Abbreviations, and Sigla is provided to facilitate identification. Copies of works from the apocrypha or pseudepigrapha which have also been found among the Dead Sea Scrolls are listed under their titles in the apocrypha or pseudepigrapha sections, with appropriate cross references. Within the sections of the bibliography, the apocrypha appear in the order of Rahlfs' edition of the Septuagint, and the pseudepigrapha are organized alphabetically by the names of the ancient authors to whom they are attributed. Abbreviations for the apocrypha and pseudepigrapha follow Charlesworth's The Pseudepigrapha and Modern Research.

The Dead Sea Scrolls appear under the numbers of the caves in which they were found (1Q = Qumran Cave 1, etc.), and within each cave grouping by their numerical designations in the Discoveries in the Judaean Desert series. Texts published outside this official series and without numerical designations are generally grouped under the appropriate cave by the name of the scholar on the international team to whom they have been assigned for publication. Sigla follow Fitzmyer's The Dead Sea Scrolls---Major Publications and Tools for Study.

Call numbers are given for publications included in the collection of the Harold B. Lee Library at Brigham Young University. If the call number column is blank, the work was not part of that collection at the time this bibliography was compiled. Call numbers for entries with asterisks (*) are found in the list of Abbreviations of Frequently Cited Periodicals and Collective Works.

Recent scholarly interest in the apocrypha, the pseudepigrapha, and the Dead Sea Scrolls has produced a vast secondary literature. This bibliography does not include commentaries and introductory works which do not incorporate an edition or English translation of the text under discussion. Students seeking more general treatments or editions and translations not included here should consult the Additional Sources of Bibliography.

At the outset, I must acknowledge my debt to the previous work of James H. Charlesworth, Joseph A. Fitzmyer, M. de Jonge, Robert A. Kraft, George W. E. Nickelsburg, Leonhard Rost, H. F. D. Sparks, Michael E. Stone, Géza Vermès, and many others. This bibliography may properly be considered an extension of the bibliographies compiled in their publications. I also express appreciation to Gary Gillum of the Harold B. Lee Library, who first suggested this project, and to Ronald D. Anderson, who collaborated in its early stages.
